Conference Objectives & Goals

1. Using modern techniques in crop management.
2. Development of post-harvest packages.
3. Expansions of plant breeding for pests and diseases resistance (tolerance).
4. Maximizing multidisciplinary research approaches to get closer to better crop management.
5. Monitoring the role of genetic engineering in crop production of safe, high yielding crops capacities.
6. IPM packages of agricultural products in storage for better access for international markets.

Acceptable Topics

1. Environmentally safe IPM approaches of pests or diseases either in the field or in storage.
2. Plant extracts and biotic insecticides role in plant protection.
3. Prediction programs of pests or diseases incidence and better crop management.
4. Plant breeding and screening for plant resistance (or tolerance) for pests or diseases.
5. Organic agriculture and production of UN-contaminated environmentally safe products.
6. Development of bee keeping and sericulture programs.
7. Better access to international markets with free from pesticide residues agricultural products.

أهداف المؤتمر

١. استخدام التقنيات الحديثة لإدارة المحاصيل.
٢. تنمية مهارات ما بعد الحصاد و المحافظة على سلامة المنتجات الزراعية.
٣. التوسع في برامج التربية و تقييم السلالات النباتية المقاومة أو المتحملة للإصابة للآفات و الأمراض.
٤. تنمية الجهود المشتركة و الأبحاث عديدة التخصصات من أجل زيادة الإلمام بأبعاد مشاكل إدارة المحاصيل، و زيادة الإنتاج.
٥. إظهار دور الهندسة الوراثية في إنتاج محاصيل ذات وفرة إنتاجية و أمانة للاستهلاك و صالحة للسوق المحلية و للتصدير.
٦. وقاية المنتجات النباتية أثناء التخزين من أجل رفع الكفاءة التصديرية

مجالات المؤتمر

١. استخدام الوسائل البيئية الآمنة في مكافحة الآفات على جميع المحاصيل سواء في الحقل أو أثناء التخزين
٢. دور المستخلصات النباتية و المبيدات الحيوية في مكافحة.
٣. برامج التنبؤ بالإصابة بالآفات و دورها في مكافحة المتكاملة و إدارة المحصول.
٤. التربية النباتية للمقاومة للإصابة بالآفات الحشرية أو الحيوانية أو الأمراض النباتية .
٥. الزراعة العضوية و دورها في إنتاج منتجات حيوية خالية من الملوثات الكيميائية.
٦. النهوض ببرامج تربية نحل العسل و ديدان الحرير.
٧. إيجاد فرص تصديرية بمنتجات زراعية خالية من متبقيات المبيدات و المعادن الثقيلة.

Registration

The registration fees:

Abstract.....

Cairo contains worlds within worlds, full of charm and contradictions. Yet, it beckons you to linger and explore the various districts - each a different piece of the puzzle, evoking a fragment of Cairo's rich 7000 year old history. A walk down any street in Cairo is a feast for the senses, and exploring beyond the popular districts below will not fail to fascinate.

Central Cairo The current heart of Cairo, the downtown region roughly centered around Midan Tahrir, stretching east to Ramses Station and south to Garden City, is relatively young - only in the mid 1800s was this area west of Ezbekiya to the Nile drained and developed. The architecture of the downtown cacophony of shops, restaurants, theatres, offices, apartment buildings, and hotels possesses an old-world elegance. Stand at Midan Talat Harb and you could almost imagine you were in Paris - well, until you are approached by an old man in a galabeya peddling papyrus

The area also boasts numerous museums and contemporary art galleries. The Egyptian Museum, with its monumental collection of antiquities, is located on Midan Tahrir and requires several hours to peruse the collection. Bookworms will want to browse among the dozens of small second hand stalls at Ezbekiya, near Midan Opera, where there is a good selection of both Arabic and foreign language publications and magazines.

Old Cairo (Masr El Qadima) Sometimes known as "Coptic Cairo", this area provides an historical link between Cairo's Pharaonic and Islamic periods. It is likely that the area was settled from the 6th century BC. It was here that in 130 AD, the Roman emperor Trojan erected Babylon Fort, the core of the old city. The area features several old Coptic churches as well as Ben Ezra Synagogue - the oldest in Egypt. The ruins of the old city of Fustat are also nearby. Many potters and ceramists used to work in the area but have recently had been relocated.

Islamic Cairo The name of this district is misleading, as this fascinating part of the city is no more "Islamic" than any other. It seems to be the conventional way to describe the area that became the city center during medieval times. This area is very rich in history and culture, and takes days to explore thoroughly.

Highlights of this district include the Citadel; the vibrant Khan El Khalilii which is full of small shops, craftsmen's workshops, restaurants and coffee houses; Al Azhar Mosque, a thousand year old center of Islamic study; the Gayer-Anderson Museum and the Cities of the Dead, cemeteries that are also home for hundreds of living residents. Throughout the district, there are dozens of beautiful mosques with many different architectural styles, which are open to non-Muslim visitors. There are also several old houses and secular buildings that have been converted into museums or public spaces.

Giza The area to the west of the Nile is technically a separate Governate from Cairo, but inextricably linked to the city. It is difficult to imagine that only a hundred years ago, the road leading west to the pyramids of Giza was a simple dirt track through an agricultural area. Now it is a clamorous wall of concrete and confusion, with numerous hotels, restaurants, nightclubs and residences. The Pyramids of Giza have drawn visitors throughout the centuries to gaze in awe at the "glory of the ancients". Surrounding the Pyramids area are the obligatory papyrus and perfume shops catering to the needs of the tourist?

Dokki and Agouza Primarily a residential district comprising the villas and private sporting clubs of Cairo's movers and shakers and more cramped "baladi" quarters and market areas, there are a few interesting sites to visit in the area. These include the Agricultural Museum and Mamhoud Khalil Museum, a refurbished mansion displaying mostly European art and sculpture collected by Khalil, a pre-war politician. Moving north along the Corniche, the main landmarks are the Balloon Theatre and the National Circus, both of which occasionally give performances, and the British Council, which offers language training in both English and Arabic.

Accommodation

Accommodations in Cairo are in heavy demand in November. Thus we urge you to reserve your accommodations as soon as you decided to register.

To assist delegates attending the Conference, the organization committee should be used to handle hotel bookings. Preferential room rates have been negotiated for delegates at a range of hotels but delegates are advised to book their accommodation early to avoid disappointment.
